

GOOD FOR BUSINESS PLEDGE

A Common-Sense Commitment to Protect Free Enterprise and Human Flourishing

As a state legislator committed to a strong economy, thriving communities, and the dignity of work, I pledge to support policies that protect the true purpose of business:

Advancing human flourishing by creating value through excellence in the provision of goods and services.

I believe:

1. Business exists to create economic value through excellence.
2. Businesses are accountable first to their owners/shareholders—not to ill-defined “stakeholders.”
3. Business must reject politicization.
4. Businesses must embrace their own positive role in society.

Therefore, I pledge to:

- Oppose laws that politicize the workplace or force businesses to take sides in ideological debates.
- Protect the freedom of business owners, employees, and vendors to speak, believe, and associate freely—without fear of retaliation.
- Support policies that reduce red tape, protect property rights, and strengthen free enterprise.
- Respect the rightful role of business owners and investors to make decisions for, and guide, their own companies.
- Champion small businesses, family-run shops, entrepreneurs, and large companies that employ thousands of hard-working Americans. Each of these is essential to our state’s economy and culture.

I commit to reviewing legislation through a “Good for Business” lens and standing up for a culture of free enterprise over forced politics.
